Wrocław is the largest city in western Poland, a historical capital of Lower Silesia, an important Polish cultural and business spot. The city was described by Norman Davis as “microcosm”, due to its character as a crossing point of cultural, political and religious influences, from the primeval Celtic and Slavic history, through the times of Polish Kingdom, Holy Roman Empire, Austrian Empire, Prussia, Germany, up to our present day, when Wroclaw’s reputation is build on being one of the biggest centers of innovations and new technologies in Poland.

The city offers many landmarks and sites to see, for example: Ostrów Tumski, Rynek- the marketplace, with the Wrocław Town Hall,. Other recognizable sites are: National Forum of Music, The Centennial Hall (a World Heritage Site inscribed by UNESCO) and the nearby colorful Japanese Garden, Panorama Racławicka, a cycloramic painting of one of Poland’s most famous battles, and National Museum with and unique collection of Silesian art.

Wrocław is dynamically developing in the business service sector; also the cooperation between the local authorities and the academic community creates a supportive base for investments and varied initiatives. Foreign investors and leading polish companies are successfully exploring the economic potential of Wrocław and the region.

Wroclaw is a famous student-friendly place with 22 institutions of higher learning and a multicultural, lively atmosphere. Truly a “Meeting Place”, Wrocław hosted Euro 2012 and carried a fully deserved title of European Capital of Culture in 2016.
